NATION WAITS FDR ADDRESS ON U. S. PLANS

President Expected To Make New Exposition of Policy In Broadcast Today.

TO BE HEARD AT 12:45

Churchill, Nomura Conferences Seen as Possible Topics of 10-Minute Talk.

(By Associated Press)

HYDE PARK, N. Y.—America's millions looked to their president today for a new exposition of policy and plans in an address highlighting the nation's observance of Labor day.

While the president would not disclose in advance even the general scope of his speech, he had intimated in Washington it might be significant because of its coincidence with the second anniversary of Europe's war.

An assortment of timely subjects, readily susceptible of amplification, was available to him.

There were his conferences, for instance, with British Prime Minister Winston Churchill, and with Japanese Ambassador Kichisaburo Nomura, who delivered a note to Mr. Roosevelt from his premier, Prince Fuminaro Konoye. Today's address was the first presidential broadcast since he talked with either of those two high officials.

There was his declaration, in a Labor day statement, that both management and employes would continue to realize "there must be full and uninterrupted production" of war weapons and supplies.

There were the dangers, as he sees them, which confront America, and the need for sacrifices to meet those perils.

Some persons thought the president might have provided a theme for his address when he told some friends and neighbors Saturday that peace for this nation "isn't all in our keeping," that dangers which have convulsed the world may "very possibly" be greater now than when the war started.

By quoting a letter from a woman who had watched the course of the conflict at first hand, Mr. Roosevelt also gave his endorsement to a statement that "world domination, including of necessity the Americas, is the definite planned purpose of the dictators," but that many Americans "seem to have no idea of what hangs over their heads."

The ten-minute presidential address today was set for 12:45 p. m. EST, to climax an hour's program sponsored by the Office of Production Management.

Tear Gas, Bullets End Brief Career Of Triple Killer

FT. WORTH, Tex.—(AP)—Brooding over the poor health of his wife and two women visitors in his home, G. D. Driskill shot and killed them and in turn was slain after he wounded a policeman who attempted to intervene.

The dead: Driskill, about 73. Mrs. Driskill, 69. Mrs. Fannie Moore, 65, of Dallas. Mrs. Driskill's sister, a visitor. Mrs. Ola Jordan, Arlington, a niece of Mrs. Driskill, also a visitor.

A verdict by Justice of the Peace Gus Brown held that Driskill shot the three women. Police quoted friends of the family as saying that Driskill

New Westbrook Clubhouse As Shown By Drawing Of Architects

This architect's drawing portrays the new $120,000 clubhouse for Westbrook Country club which will replace the clubhouse destroyed by fire last May. The structure will be of white brick Georgian architecture and will connect with the club's present locker house shown at the right. Bids for construction of the building will be received Wednesday and work is expected to be started next week. The drawing here shows how the clubhouse will look as viewed from the south side or that facing Springmill road.

Parade Starts City's Labor Day Festivities

Colorful Banners, Hats, Wooden Canes To Be In March of 8,000 Today; Big Program Planned For Park.

By ELLIS H. SPRUNGER

Marking more than half a century of Labor day celebrations since the first observance in New York City in 1882, labor in Mansfield took a holiday today, put on white hats, carried wooden canes and colorful banners to celebrate.

The color of Labor day was to come in today's parade which was to move from Park avenue west and Bowman street at 10 a. m. Floats, bands and at least 8,000 workmen will march, parade marshals said.

On the more serious side, after the parade celebrators will gather at Central park where Mayor W. J. Locke will give a talk of welcome. Philip Clowes, speaking for the Steel Workers' Organization Council, and Ernest DeMaio, speaking for the United Electrical, Radio and Machine workers, will talk telling the progress of labor during the past year.

Early in the afternoon workers will move to North Lake park where they will be entertained by a baseball game between the Sons of Herman and the Westinghouse team, contests galore, free dancing at the Coliseum and a floor show whenever the two dance bands rest.

Winding up their work, Harry Boyer, Melvin Marviksin and Sid Earhart, preparation committeemen, remarked this morning that "we've done all our work and we hope everybody has a swell time.

AMERICAN HELD

Social Worker Arrested By French Authorities.

CERBERE, France — (At the Spanish Frontier) —(AP)— Varian M. Fry, American social worker aiding refugees and political prisoners in France, has been arrested by French authorities who sought some way to expel him from the country.

Brought to the Spanish frontier by French policemen, Fry was turned back by Spanish border officials because he lacked a visa.

He said he had been arrested and ordered deported for being pro-Jewish and anti-Nazi. He said also that he was charged with sending money to a Communist in the course of his refugee work.

UNIONS SHOW MARKED GAINS

Both CIO and AFL Ranks In Mansfield Report Increase In Memberships.

Since Labor Day of a year ago, Mansfield labor groups, both CIO and AFL, have more than doubled their memberships bringing organized union labor in the city to its highest peak in history with an estimated 13,000 members.

AFL organizers, according to Russell Kemp, trades council secretary, have added 3,000 workers in the past year to bring the total membership to 5,000.

CIO authorities claim a gain of 6,100 members in the last twelve months, bringing their total membership to approximately 8,000.

Both labor groups claim as members workers who are not affiliated but are represented by them. The winning of the right to bargain for employes of a plant in a National Labor Board election usually results in the winner claiming all plant workers as members.

The two labor groups organize labor under different methods. While the AFL organizes workers of one trade into one union, the CIO organizes the entire membership of a plant or industry, regardless of trade.

Among the local plants swelling CIO rolls in 1941 are the Westing-

SCHOOLS FACE TWO PROBLEMS

Enrollment Drop, Shortage of Teachers Holds True In City, Rest of Nation.

School days return to most of the country this week, bringing with them two major problems—(1) a declining enrollment over the nation and (2) a shortage of teachers.

Both problems have confronted school authorities in Mansfield and Richland county. In Mansfield, the board of education has several times had to employ new teachers after apparently having set up complete faculties. The cause for the shortage is, of course, the call of defense jobs and the low birth rate during depression years.

In Washington, the United States office of education predicted the largest drop in America's school population ever recorded.

The office estimated the 1941-42 army of students would total 31,566,000, a decline of 160,000 from the 31,726,000 attending classes in the 1940-41 school year.

John W. Studebaker, U. S. commissioner of education, said "This will be a critical year for American education. Schools will face new responsibilities growing out of national defense." The schools, he added, "will explain in more detail

French Charge Official With Being 'Freemason.'

VICHY, Unoccupied France—(AP)—Leon Perrier, senator from the Isere department, has been arrested and administratively interned at Vals-Les-Bains on charges of being a "notorious Freemason" and maintaining contact with the Free French, it was announced officially today.

The charges also said that the former minister of labor furnished news to the DeGaullist radio. He was a political leader of the Isere department for 40 years.

The arrest of a woman closed the list of persons apprehended in the bomb murder of Mart Dormoy, interned former interior minister, it was announced.

Work to Start Soon On $120,000 Building

Architects Complete Plans For New Westbrook Clubhouse; Structure To Be of White Brick, Georgian Style.

By LARRY MURPHY

Opening the way for the construction of a new $120,000 clubhouse for Westbrook Country club to replace the rambling frame structure destroyed by fire last May, bids are to be received this week on the new building and architects believe that actual construction will be under way next week.

Plans and specifications, only recently completed, call for the erection of a massive building of white brick. Bids will be received Wednesday and the contract will be awarded later in the week, according to Althouse and Jones, Mansfield architects who drew up the plans.

Funds for the new structure were obtained through a bond sale to which the membership subscribed. The bond procedure was unique in that the goal was quickly reached from within the club membership and without outside assistance. At the recent tournament of the Ohio Senior Golf association which drew members from outstanding clubs throughout Ohio, the Mansfield membership drew high praise for its new building finance plan.

Like its predecessor, according to the architects, the new clubhouse is to be a low, rambling building, facing the golf course. It will be connected with the present locker house, and attractively

RUSSIANS MAKE MYSTERY TRIP

Won't Talk as Planes Stop at Alaska En Route To U. S. Capital.

(By Associated Press)

NOME, Alaska — Forty-seven uncommunicative Russians bearing diplomatic passports stepped ashore in this sub-Arctic town last night from two huge flying boats — apparently on a secret mission to the United States.

The Russians admitted (1) that they had left Moscow Thursday, and (2) that they were en route for Washington, D. C., via Anchorage, Sitka and San Francisco.

They left unanswered a dozen questions. They did not say, for example, whether they had started their 6,000-mile trip to Noma on Thursday Moscow time or Nome time. If it was Moscow time, they were five days en route. If it was Nome time, the flying period was only four days.

They also left unanswered the principal question of the purpose of their trip. The Soviet embassy in Washington, D. C., was of no more help. The embassy spokesman merely said he had no news of any such flight.

Alexander Skorukoe, Soviet consul general in San Francisco, said he was unable to disclose at this time any information concerning the planes. He indicated, however, details would be released today through the Russian embassy in Washington.

No names were offered by the Jap Commentator Says Nippon Makes Foes of Friends.

TOKYO — (AP) — Need for a greater bargaining element in Japan's diplomacy was stressed today by Retsu Kiyosawa, commentator in the widely read commercial paper Chugai Shogyo, in an article headed "an open letter to Foreign Minister Toyoda."

The article urged Vice Admiral Toyoda to attempt to regain the sympathy of elements abroad and said Japanese diplomacy in the past had tended to convert every foreign friend into an enemy.

Kiyosawa cautioned his countrymen against expecting an end soon to the European conflict although he said Germany had conquered a territory more than three times as large as Japan.

Soviet Pilots In Death Dive Upon Pontoons

Reds Claim 1,000 German Engineers Die In Attempt to Cross River; Arctic Drive Reported Beaten; RAF Steps Up Aerial War.

(By Associated Press)

MOSCOW—Russian forces were reported today to have smashed a German attempt to bridge the Dnieper river barrier to the eastern Ukraine, saved a Ukrainian town after a day and night of fighting in the streets, and beaten a Nazi drive into arctic Russia.

The first communique of the day said only, as it has for days, that fighting was raging along the entire front. Military dispatches, however, indicated that Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's central army still was counterattacking strongly while other Red army forces held doggedly on the hard-pressed Leningrad and southern flanks.

The Soviet bureau of information credited the four-man crew of a Russian bomber with demolishing—at the cost of their own lives—a half-finished pontoon bridge which the Germans had labored for three days under heavy fire to build across the Dnieper.

Their bomber aflame from an anti-aircraft shell, the crew was said to have steered purposely for a crash on the pontoons, exploding their bomb load and wrecking the structure.

The Russians reported nearly 1,000 Nazi engineers and infantry had been killed by artillery fire and bombings as they struggled to build the bridge which was described only as near the town of "D"—(possibly Dnieperopetrovsk).

(The Germans said Red army forces had suffered heavy losses in attempts to cross the Dnieper in small boats to regain footholds along the west bank of the river south of Kiev. The Germans said Russian losses were particularly large when they were repulsed last Friday in an attempt to recapture a Dnieper island south of Kherson, near the river mouth.)

The Soviet bureau of information said Russian volunteers fought alongside regular army units in a day and night of street fighting in which German tank and infan-

REPORTS FINN, RED PEACE MOVE

London Hears Negotiations Under Way, Soviet Troops Leaving Northern Line.

BULLETIN

LONDON—(AP)—United States Ambassador John G. Winant said today: "I know absolutely nothing of any plan to have me act as an intermediary in any Russian-Finnish negotiations."

(By Associated Press)

LONDON — Reports that a separate Russian-Finnish peace was in the making—with negotiations possibly conducted through United States diplomatic channels — reached London during the week-end along with equally unconfirmed word that Premier Joseph Stalin already had withdrawn his northern army to or near the old Russian-Finnish frontier.

The Stockholm correspondent of the Daily Mail reported Stalin had taken the initiative in the peace move that might shorten the Red army's present battlefront by almost 500 miles.

The Stockholm account indicated Russian Marshal Klementi Voroshilov had drawn his forces back in some places as much as 150 miles. This version of Russian secret, voluntary abandonment of the territory

British Fail To Disclose Number Of Casualties In Bombing.

NONE INJURED

County Escapes Traffic Toll; 21 Die In State, 287 In U. S.

Despite heavy Labor Day traffic which clogged highways of the Mansfield area, Richland county escaped any serious accidents over a week-end which saw 21 persons meet death in Ohio and 287 throughout the nation.

Mansfield police and state highway patrolmen reported only minor collisions in which none were injured.

Ohio deaths involving automobile mishaps over Saturday and Sunday numbered 21, only a few more than the normal week-end. Four drownings, three in boating accidents, were reported.

At least 287 died in auto accidents since Friday evening, 47 others drowned and 72 died of miscellaneous, ranging from suicides to falls.

California had the biggest traffic record with 29 dead in highway accidents. New York had 28 and Ohio and Illinois both 21.

Soldiers Get $16,000,000--- So Merchants Get No Holiday

(By Associated Press)

WITH ARMY IN ARKANSAS AND LOUISIANA — With more than $16,000,000 in their pockets, the nearly 400,000 troops of the second and third armies massed in these two states were on a spending spree today that emptied hundreds of store shelves.

A holiday for the soldiers, it was an extra tough working day for many others. Hundreds of merchants in the maneuver area, who ordinarily would have observed the holiday, kept their establishments open to accommodite the soldiers.

Refreshments spots sold out their stocks quickly in most of the small towns and even in some of the larger cities near the troop bivouacs. Restaurant owners found continuous lines outside their doors.

Movie houses were packed, as were other amusement centers.

Their holiday coinciding with their mid-maneuver payday during the week-end, the soldiers were free and anxious to make use of their temporary wealth.

The payroll was one of the largest ever turned loose at one time in the two states, and because of the necessity for properly guarding the vast movements of cash, the units were paid on a schedule staggered over five days.

Many of the stores sold in one day as much as they ordinarily did in an entire year—especially country dealers in tobaccos, candies and refreshments.

Guardsmen Back Home After Rigorous Week of Marching and Tear Gas Drills

But Mansfield's Unit Had Good Time at Camp Perry.

After a week's training at Camp Perry, Mansfield's Co. F of the Ohio State Guard returned to Mansfield by special train yesterday morning.

Welcomed by relatives and friends at the Baltimore and Ohio station, the guardsmen marched to the Mansfield Armory on the Ashland road, in a column of threes.

There the company was dismissed and some of the men went home at once while a few paused there to discuss the week's happenings.

"We had a swell time up there. We really got some training that did us some good," declared Pvt. Lee McFarlin, 460 South Diamond street.

Commenting on the long march from the Baltimore and Ohio station to the Armory, McFarlin said, "It was pretty hot," but he added that the men didn't mind it much because they are in tip-top condition.

That Mansfield's guard unit did spend a rigorous week of field training is shown by a brief schedule of their activities day by day, Lt. Hollis D. Moorhead, of 501 Lexington avenue, said.

On Monday the guardsmen had a firearms drill; Tuesday, rifle practice; Wednesday, bayonet practice; Thursday, gas demonstration and practice; Friday, a review of the week's work, and Saturday, a regimental inspection.

GEN. JOHNSON: Urges 2 Billion Non-Defense Cost Cut

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON — I suppose there will be a good deal of doubt and criticism about the president's order reorganizing the overhead units for industrial mobilization for national defense —that we still have no single responsible official in charge of the effort, that a president as obviously overburdened as Atlas with the affairs of the whole world still hasn't been willing to delegate responsibility and authority, that the set-up doesn't follow the proved excellence of the war industries board of 1918, et cetera, et cetera.

Johnson

As a veteran of that earlier effort and as a constant student of its principles as affected by later developments over many years, I can't agree, or at least prefer to withhold judgment, until this boiling has a chance to jell.

To take the last supposed objection first, this new set-up very closely follows the pattern of B. M. Baruch's own war industries board. In most cases, those who think differently do not understand that precedent. The slight variances from it can easily be defended on the ground of changed circumstances and personalities. Furthermore, this organization so closely follows Mr. Baruch's own present ideas and recommendations that it would take a good deal of quibbling to distinguish between the two. It isn't a Rosenman plan. It is a Baruch plan.

That brings up a second supposed objection, frequently discussed in this column. B. M. Baruch was never any real poohbah. He depended on interlocking boards with representatives of all the great heads of effort—price fixing, priorities, economic warfare, civilian supply and the separate administrations of food, fuel and transportation, war and navy, and "allied purchasing" (lend-lease)—all sitting together on major decisions, with appeal, in case of disagreement, to the next higher or policy-making board, and final appeal, if necessary, to the president. This new order adopts that principle.

Take price-fixing as an example. Robert Brookings was in charge of that, reporting directly to the president, as Leon Henderson is now. But he was also a member of the supercontrol board, just as is Henderson. Prices were established after due consideration of both priorities and rationing. The modern parallel, at least on paper, is perfect.

No one would pick Henry Wallace as an administrator of industry. But there was an excellent reason for making him chairman of the top-side board and leaving its detailed administration to an executive secretary, also in charge of priorities. There are cabinet members on that board and Mr. Wallace is vice president. In the present state of Washington sensitiveness, I can think of only one better solution, which would have been to make Steve Early the executive secretary. He understands how to handle even cabinet members. He speaks with the recognized authority of the boss. He is a far more practical man than Mr. Wallace for such a job.

However, this was a good alternative solution. It puts a heavy responsibility on Mr. Donald Nelson, who is to be Mr. Wallace's "Joe", or man Friday. He still has to prove that he is of anywhere near the caliber for that job, but give him a chance.

As a plan, this column can't criticize it. Its fundamental principles have been advocated here for years. The pity is that it is three years late and immeasurable harm has been done in the meantime. As to most of the personalities, it could be said that this is just a realignment of the same old bunglers. But maybe they couldn't do better before without this kind of reorganization. Again, let's wait and see and wish them well.

MOBILIZE CITY FOLK TO REAP OREGON CROPS

Farmers Issue Appeal For Help In $10,000,000 Hop, Bean Harvest.

(By Associated Press)

SALEM, Ore. — Agricultural Oregon, caught in a critical farm labor shortage, mobilized unaccustomed city dwellers today in an attempt to save a $10,000,000 crop.

Radio stations broadcast appeals for workers to enter the hop, prune and string bean fields of the fertile Willamette valley. Schools delayed scheduled Tuesday openings to make children available and WPA projects released all workers.

There was no time out for a Labor day celebration on farms of western Oregon, the nation's largest hop-producing section.

A bumper crop was ripe, but only one-fourth of the necessary pickers could be found. Marion and Polk counties, heart of the region, had 5,000 pickers and needed 20,000 more.

In the Grants Pass area of southern Oregon, hop farmers bid for workers, and wages rose to 2½ cents for each pound picked, one cent above the offer at the season's start.

Prune and bean growers reported a similar scarcity, attributed largely on the induction of young men in the armed forces and the migration of workers to booming industrial centers. All told, 30,000 harvest workers were needed.

Governor Charles A. Sprague asked men on a five-day week to go to the farms on their days off, and urged women and children to leave city homes for the harvest fields.

Response was immediate, Ted Huff, manager of the largest state employment service office in Portland, said. The commander of the Oregon American Legion promised all posts in the state would help mobilize pickers, and volunteers kept the telephone ringing at the Portland employment office, which with other key offices remained open through the holiday.

airmen except to customs officials, who validated diplomatic passports which allowed the aliens unusual privileges. The customs officials did not reveal what they had learned.

The planes began refueling on the waters of Norton sound where they landed, but were expected to refuel again at Anchorage or Sitka where larger gasoline stocks are available. The fliers said they would take off for Anchorage today.

The two planes arrived without any warning whatsoever. One circled over the town of Nome, and the other followed it to a landing on the bay.

Only three Russian planes are known to have crossed Alaskan territory before yesterday.

In June of 1937, three Soviets headed by Pilot Valeri Chealov streaked across the "roof-of-the-world" route non-stop from Moscow to Vancouver, Wash. A month later, three more, headed by pilot Mikhail Gromov, took the same route and landed at San Jacinto, Calif. In August of the same year, Sigmund Levaneffsky, Soviet air hero, and five companions were lost on an attempted Moscow-to-United States flight which ended somewhere in the Arctic ocean or the frozen wastes of far northern Alaska. Neither their plane nor their bodies ever were found.

WORKERS BATTLE RISING FLOOD IN $20,000,000 COPPER MINE

(By Associated Press)

BISBEE, Ariz. — Veteran mine workers were placed on an "around-the-clock" schedule today as Phelps Dodge corporation sought with every scientific means at its command to control an underground flood threatening its $20,000,000 Copper Queen mine.

A dynamite blast in a drift half mile away released a body of water early yesterday at the 2,700-foot level in junction shaft and despite the manning of every available auxiliary pump the water rose almost 200 feet within 24 hours.

Harrison M. Lavender, general manager of Phelps Dodge properties in Arizona, admitting apprehension, said the result of the flood would remain "undeterminable" for probably another 24 hours.

Meanwhile, workers sealed the shaft at the 2,433 foot level and company officials said hopefully "it should hold unless something unforeseen occurs."

Deep well pumps were reported en route from Phelps Dodge Morenci project, more than 150 miles distant.

The Copper Queen, in operation for more than half a century, is the state's largest gold and silver and second largest copper producer. The 1940 copper production for the Warren district was 109,750,000 pounds, most of which came from this Phelps Dodge property.

Pumps put into operation on the 2,700-foot level, lowest in the mine, failed to stem the flow of water, which officials said apparently was coming from a lake beneath the nearby city of Warren. Next level on which stationary pumps are located is the 2,200.

Bulkheads were erected yesterday in a vain effort to stop the flood.

1,000 IN FLIGHT

Many Stranded as Wisconsin Rivers Run Rampant.

HAYWARD, Wis. —(AP)— Flood rivers which ran rampant following heavy week-end rains stranded hundreds of holiday vacationists in northern Wisconsin today and caused an estimated 1,000 persons to flee their homes.

Highway, utility and railroad officials agreed that damage was enormous and a newspaper man who toured the area said it could be estimated "only in millions of dollars."

Twenty-seven bridges were washed out on one stretch of railroad line alone, several dams were undermined and miles of highway wrecked. Swirling waters covered fields 10 feet deep in places, ruining farm crops, and caused great damage to homes and business places.

SAYS U. S. CAN'T GROW SILKWORMS

Professor Claims Mulberry Trees Won't Thrive Here.

ITHACA, N. Y. —(AP)— Sorry, girls, there's little chance of growing silkworms in this country.

The college of agriculture at Cornell has received many requests about growing mulberry trees, on which the silkworms feed. According to Prof. M. B. Hoffman, great efforts have been made to start a national silk industry, starting as early as 1630, but the problems were always the same.

Among them are the trouble in growing the trees; selection of enough of the proper leaves to support the silkworms and the control of silkworm diseases, which for some reason are not serious in the Orient.

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

Speaking For Myself.

I WOULD like to start a campaign about Franchot Tone. I mean I would like to start a campaign to make his cinematic superiors give him roles suited to his abilities. When he is on the stage, he does very well playing tough Irwin Shaw gangsters and almost excessively virile Hemingway soldiers; but the minute he steps on California soil he gets grabbed by the undiscerning casting directors and shoved into films in which he is required to play a sap. I am thinking now of his latest, "The Woman Is Mine." In it Franchot wears glasses and plays a Mr. Milquetoast of the first—and weakest—water. He is disguised as a shrinking violet and comes within an inch (or anyway a reel) of losing the girl.

That tiny beehive of commerce beneath Broadway and 42nd Street at the subway entrance fascinates me. Here, within an area of a few score square feet, you can have breakfast, lunch or dinner, buy flowers and candy for your girl, have your watch fixed, get a haircut and a shoeshine, purchase an engagement ring and a wedding ring, buy books, magazines and newspapers, learn the latest song hits, test your shooting eye at a gallery, see a movie, or—oh yes—get on a subway train.

Most exciting costume I ever saw on the Broadway boards was the one Brian Aherne wore in "St. Joan." It was scarlet velvet with a high collar of what looked like sable, and a gold chain hung across the front. Jo Mielziner, I think, designed it, and when Aherne wore it, the other actors might as well not have bothered to come out on the stage.

I have always wanted to ask a Boy Scout if it's really true that stuff about rubbing two sticks together . . . Perfect way to cap a summer night is to go down to the freight sidings at the tip of Manhattan around four in the morning. When the flowers that will supply the big town for the next 24 hours come in. Flowers for penthouse drawing rooms and gansters' funerals and brides' bouquets. Tomorrow's orchids.

Well, both The New York Times and C. V. R. It's the uniform of Trinity House, an ancient brotherhood of lighthouse keepers of England.

That band of Ozzie Caswell's at the Rainbow Room is one of the smoothest society outfits I've encountered since a black-haired broadly-smiling young man named Eddy Duchin made such a hit at the Central Park Casino . . . People are always dropping the bromide that cooks hate to eat, but I know one, the chef at Le Cafe Arnold, who weighs almost 300 pounds and eats six times a day . . . I can't pass an elementary school building without stopping to read the legends in chalk on the surrounding walls and sidewalks. In my day, they followed a rather conventional pattern: "Tommy Loves Nancy." "Betsy is Johnny's Girl," and that sort of thing. But the other day I passed one that said, "Irving Is a Character." . . . What an exciting theatrical season this one ought to be. Tallulah Bankhead, Raymond Massey, Groucho Marx, Walter Huston, Helen Hayes, Eddie Cantor, Spencer Tracy—all of them on Broadway. CONTINUE CHECK

Pennsylvania Officials Fight Spread of Polio.

HARRISBURG, Pa.—(AP)—State officials kept close check today despite the Labor day holiday on the outbreak of infantile paralysis sweeping over much of Pennsylvania as the death toll to date this year climbed to 21.

Two more deaths were reported as the number of those stricken neared the 300 mark. Jerome Callahan, of Somerville, Luzerne county, died yesterday a few days after he returned from a vacation at Harvey's lake. Mrs. William H. The conviction cost him his New York state license and he had lived in comparative obscurity since then.

SENATOR SAYS BUCK PASSING MARKS EFFORT

Declares Defense Expenditure Likely To Reach Total of 100 Billions.

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Declaring that "the buck has been passed around and around" on the question of cutting non-defense expenditures, Senator Byrd (D-Va) expressed the belief today that such spending could be reduced by $2,000,000,000.

Inapproving the record $3,672,000,000 revenue bill, the senate finance committee last week accepted Byrd's amendment setting upa special 14-man committee to study methods of curtailing non-essential outlays. The group would include the secretary of the treasury, the budget director and a dozen members of the senate and house taxing committees.

"It is possible and probable," Byrd said in an interview today, that our defense effort and aid to other democracies, even without involvement in the war, may reach the colossal sum of $100,000,000,000.

"To me it is little short of outrageous that there has been no real effort to reduce the non-defense and non-essential items in the federal budget. We are spending for non-defense, peace-time purposes, including the ordinary cost of the army and navy, $8,000,000,000 per year. This is two and one-half times as much as the total cost of government in 1929. Upon this $8,000,000,000 we are pyramiding the terrific cost of defense.

"The president has said that these costs should be cut, but the budgets submitted to congress do not show any cut. The secretary of the treasury has said these items should be cut. The buck has been passed around and around. Neither the executive nor the legislative branch has taken the initiative."

Byrd said the purpose of his amendment creating the 14-man investigating group was "to reduce non-defense spending, to stop the buck passing and place the responsibility equally on both (executive and legislative) branches represented by a joint committee. . . .

"In my judgment we can reduce non-defense spending by $2,000,000,000, and to this extent avoid increasing the public debt or imposing any further increase in taxes upon the already overburdened taxpayer."

Meanwhile, legislative draftsmen worked through the Labor Day holiday to put finishing touches on the tax measure. The finance committee arranged to give the bill a final going-over tomorrow and it will be taken up in the senate Wednesday.

Although the tax measure headed the pending legislative canendar, the holiday saw discussion of the proposed administration bill for price control legislation.

Miss Harriet Elliott, associate administrator of the office of price administration, said that the price bill, now being considered by a house committee, represented "the best plan offered to date to protect us from inflation, and the dire consequences of inflation."

There was a hint, however, that the bill might be due for a troublesome road. Chairman Smith (D., S. C.) of the senate agriculture committee said that when any price-fixing measure came before the senate, he would seek to amend it to provide for the freezing of all government-held stocks of wheat and cotton.

750 Crack Shots Enroll At School In Rifle Matches

CAMP PERRY—(AP)—More than 750 crack shots from all parts of the country are enrolled in the federal government's three-day small bore and pistol school designed to produce qualified instructors and promote civilian marksmanship.

The school is the opening feature of the national pistol and small bore rifle matches continuing through Sunday.

The course is open to any citizen over 16 years old and the government expects many of its graduates to instruct recently organized home guard and state guard units in the handling of firearms.

With the 30-caliber events eliminated from the program for the first time since 1934, entries in the 22-caliber rifle and pistol events already have established new records.

There were 750 contestants in the small bore field, more than 100 ahead of last year's record, and 450 pistol marksmen against 356 in 1940.

try forces finally were beaten back from an unidentified town in the Ukraine.

They fought from barricades and alleys, the Russian account declared, disabling tanks with bottles of gasoline and sometimes meeting the German infantry in bayonet charges. German losses were estimated at more than 1,600 men, six tanks and ten armored cars.

In the far north th Red army reported killing 1,200 of a picked German force of 1,500 mountaineer troops sent to capture a city identified only at "Nr" The fighting was said to have lasted three days "amidst forests, rocks, lakes and swamps of the polar zone."

Nazis Review Gains As 3rd Year Starts

BERLIN— (AP) —Adolf Hitler's armies, the conquerors of nearly three-quarters of a million square miles of European territory embracing 160,000,000 persons, plunged into their third year of war today deep in Russian territory along new trails of destruction wrought by the luftwaffe.

In the first 24 months of warfare, touched off by German operations against Poland, Nazi arms have subjugated nations whose areas total roughly the combined size of Texas, California, Montana and New Mexico, and with a total population exceeding that of the United States.

In 10 weeks of fighting in Russia alone the Germans have taken Soviet territory amounting to more than the area of greater Germany, including Austria and the Sudetenland.

Today the Germans reported their forces were repulsing efforts of the Red army to regain a foothold west of the Dneiper river in the Ukraine.

Reichmarshal Goering's air force, which has played a major role in German conquests, was reported by DNB to be dealing "destructive blows" up and down the length of the eastern front.

Iran Charges Reds Again Drop Bombs

TEHERAN, Iran (delayed)—(AP) —For the second time since Iran ceased fighting, bombs which the Iranians said were Russian fell today on the outskirts of this capital, reportedly causing some civilian casualties.

The bombs were said to have fallen in a working class district to the south of the city and in an open field a mile from the Doshan Tappen airport.

Two bomb craters five feet deep in the field were examined by Lieut. Col. Francis Tompkings, United States military attache, who said he found propaganda leaflets nearby telling Iranians that the Russians were their friends.

British Bomb Ruhr, Rhineland Areas

LONDON—(AP)—British airmen were reported to have bombed the Ruhr and Rhineland last night as both the British and Germans stepped up the aerial war.

The RAF, in one of its busiest days since last fall, took advantage of improving weather and began attacks at dawn yesterday, the air ministry said.

The offensive continued almost without stop and when night fell additional raiders left England for the continent.

(A German announcement said eight British planes were shot down during the night in raids on Germany. Other planes, presumably Russian, attacked Germany from over the Baltic but Berlin said they failed to reach the German capital.)

Among the many attacks which reached Lille, Cherbourg, the Netherlands coast, Brest, and targets near LeTrait and Lannion, the air ministry said, an American-built fortress plane made a daring daylight attack on Bremen.

As though in answer, German raiders, coming over in formation for the first time in recent weeks, made a night attack on northeastern and eastern England. A communique said residential property was damaged and a number of casualties caused.

British, Reds Make Contact in Iran

SIMLA, India —(AP)— A British communique on operations in Iran said today contact had been established between British and Russian forces in the country.

It said a detachment of British troops yesterday moved from Kermanshah north to Sinneh where a small detachment of Soviet forces was met.

The Russians, the communique reported, "withdrew to their headquarters after a mutual exchange of compliments.

The announcement also reported the proclamation of martial law yesterday in Teheran and British occupation on Saturday of Hamadan, about 200 miles airline southwest of the Iranian capital.

the differences between dictatorships and democracies."

The education office estimated the enrollment in elementary schools would drop to 20,707,000, or 210,000 under the last school year; that the kindergarten population would show a 15,000 decline from the 640,000 total of last year.

"This decrease," the office said, "is due to the low birth rate from 1930 to 1938."

High schools and colleges, however, have not yet felt the full effects of the depression curtailment of births.

The estimate for forthcoming high school enrollment was 7,334,000, compared with 7,234,000 in the 1940-41 term—up 100,000. In colleges a 25,000 rise was looked for, raising the enrollment to 1,450,000. Some educators, however, said the figures were uncertain due to so many youths going into the armed services and into defense industries.

Those expecting an increase in the total college enrollment contended that while Johnny may go to the army or to work, "more men in jobs means more money for Mary's education."

The total school enrollments, as calculated by the education office, embraces over 2,000,000 who will attend evening and part-time schools, business colleges, nurse training institutions and private trade schools.

Viewing the approaching school term, Commissioner Studebaker said:

"Preparation of workers for service in defense industries will be a continued challenge. Vocational schools alone have pledged to train more than 3,000,000 persons this year for defense work. Engineering schools and colleges will expand their programs to train 140,000 persons in special courses designed to meet the defense shortage of engineers, chemists, physicists and production supervisors.

"Public and private schools may be expected to adapt their programs in 1941-42 to give stronger stress to health and physical education, citizenship training, community-national-and-international relations, with particular emphasis upon hemispheric solidarity.

"The number of women teachers may be expected to rise as larger numbers of men go into military or industrial defense service e College enrollments may be affected also, but the plea of the president for students to complete college courses until they are definitely called into the army should help stem the possible tide of fewer college-university registrations by young men. Women enrollments in colleges are expected to go higher this year than last year."

won from Finland in the winter war of 1939-40 could not be confirmed in authoritative quarters here.

United States sources in the British capital said they were unable to confirm or deny reports that United States diplomats — Ambassador John G. Winant in London or H. F. Arthur Schoenfeld, minister to Finland — had served as intermediaries in any such negotiations.

The Finns officially denied that the Helsinki government had started dealings with Moscow for a mediated peace—but said nothing as to whether the Russians had taken the initiative in such negotiations.

The Germans said that their Finnish allies had pushed on past Viipuri and other points approximately to the old Finnish-Russian frontier and that the Finnish policy toward a continuance of operations was unclear.

Accounts from the German capital said it was not disclosed there whether the Helsinki regime would be satisfied with regaining Finland's lost territory, or would continue in the "fight against bolshevism."

Informed sources in London declared the Germans undoubtedly would apply pressure in an attempt to force the Finns to stay in the fight, but expressed the belief the present German strength in Finland would not be sufficient to scare the Finns, who battled Russia alone in 1939.

PARADE STARTS PROGRAM FOR LABOR DAY HERE

Colorful Banners, Hats, and Canes To Highlight March of 8,000 Today.

There's just one word of caution we'd like to add. An accident caused by carelessness at this time would mar the whole occasion."

While thousands stayed in Mansfield for local holiday festivities, hundreds of others took advantage of the holiday to take short vacation trips.

The majority of the city's industrial plants were closed for three days, resuming operations tomorrow.

Approximately 4,800 employes of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company will go back to work tomorrow after a vacation of two weeks.

Ohioans planned an abundance of outdoor activities this Labor day—the last holiday of the summer.

A top-heavy sports program was on tap, but the weatherman refused to pledge cooperation, predicting showers in some sections during the afternoon.

Thousands were expected to visit the Dayton Municipal airport in Vandalia to watch stunt flying competition in the National Air Olympics.

Some of the fastest swimmers in Ohio and the midwest were entered in the second annual Cuyahoga Falls open swimming championships at the Waterworks pool in the Akron suburb.

The Cleveland Indians and the Chicago White Sox were slated for an American league baseball doubleheader at Cleveland, while at Columbus the Toledo and Columbus American Association teams meet in a twin bill with fireworks and special acts as added attractions.

In Cleveland a CIO-sponsored Labor day parade, expected to have 10,000 marchers, was to end at the square for an address by Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization. Haywood also was to deliver a radio (NBC-Blue) address from Cleveland at 4:30 p. m. (EST).

Several thousand workers in Toledo were expected to join separate parades sponsored by the AFL and CIO.

George A. Strain, state director of industrial relations, asserted in a Labor day statement that in the past year "I am satisfied that the efforts of organized labor have been to alleviate unfavorable conditions with the least amount of embarrassment of the community."

"I am sure those who have complete understanding of the problems dealing with the employment of labor know that in the majority of instances this desire has been manifest," he declared.

"Labor day to workers is a day of resolutions and I know that through the coming year labor will continue with renewed interest to promote the well-being and tranquility of its members, industry and the community."

A few industrial plants, notably those of the Timken Roller Bearing company, remained in operation over the holiday, but in most cases workers, even in defense industries, were granted the holiday.

landscaped with trees, shrubs, and a circular driveway.

Modern Georgian in design, the new $120,000 social center is planned for year-round use and nearly all types of social functions. The building is to be fire-safe, and roofed with slate as an added precautionary measure. According to present plans the clubhouse will be completed about the first week in June, 1942.

In keeping with the outside of the building, the interior will carry the Georgian or colonial motif throughout. A thoroughly modern kitchen, a dining room, grills, breakfast room, card rooms, and a large lounge have been planned for the first floor. There will also be separate locker lounges for men and women on the ground floor.

The second floor will include eight guest rooms, each with private bath.

The Ohio Senior Golf association has voted to donate enough money to furnish one of the club rooms at its own expense.

Probably the outstanding decorative feature of the clubhouse will be a large mantel in the main lounge, framed by mirrors.

Except for the two grills, flooring will be of oak throughout. The grill floors will be brick, to prevent their being marred by cleated and spiked golf shoes.

MANSFIELD, OHIO, MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1941.

Labor's Past, Present and Future

AS THE PEOPLE of America again suspend their customary activities to observe the annual holiday dedicated to Labor, emotions are more strangely mixed than on any similar occasion within recollection.

Labor day, in this year of 1941, comes in the midst of national confusion and danger such as has not previously existed since the idea of observing this holiday was born in 1882.

Back in that time, when population of the United States had just passed the 50,000,000 mark and when slow recovery was being made from the devastating effects of the Civil war, compensation for manual labor—even in the skilled crafts—was small, working hours were long, conditions in many instances were bad, and, in some sections, adult and child labor was mercilessly exploited.

Year after year, since that time, there has been steady improvement in conditions which involve the welfare of America's workers. This has come about through public recognition of the merit of workers' claims to a just share in the profits of various large and small enterprises in which they found employment.

Wages have been increased, hours of employment have been reduced, working conditions have been improved, until now American workers are the highest paid and enjoy by far the highest standards of living that exist among workers anywhere in the world.

This is as it should be. America, as the greatest country in the world—with its amazing advancement during the past half century—rightfully takes leadership in the widest possible distribution of the needs of comfortable living to its people.

But, in recent years, there has been a departure from the original admirable purposes of the organized labor movement which won the respect and sympathetic support of the considerable majority of people not directly associated with it.

Within the ranks of organized labor there has grown up a bitter rivalry between two groups, under antagonistic leadership and with injection of unscrupulous racketeers and alien opportunists, which has brought dissension and disunion in a period of crisis when the future of the nation is threatened by war.

Now, when there is great need for loyalty, unified effort and willing sacrifice, the potential strength of this great nation is being retarded by unwise acts of employes in some defense industries, instigated by greedy, self-seeking leaders or paid agitators who place personal gain above national welfare.

The brighter side of the present dark picture is found in the sincere belief that the great body of American workingmen, including a vast majority of those who are now being exploited by conscienceless racketeers, are thoroughly loyal to their country and to its government—and that these millions will soon find a way to rid their ranks of the leeches with which their organizations have become afflicted.

So, on this 1941 Labor day, let America pause to pay deserved tribute to those loyal and industrious millions of men and women who work honestly and well for the betterment of their own lot and for the preservation and continued progress of the nation of which they are an essential part.

Long life to HONEST labor—and quick extermination of the instigators of acts which misrepresent it!

Mental Weapons of Warfare

WARFARE nowadays, to succeed, must be waged not only with military methods but with weapons of the mind and heart. The Russians know this as well as anybody, and are using propaganda vigorously in their present struggle against Germany.

A correspondent reports that "colorful communiques, motion pictures, colloquial news service stories, leaflets, posters, cartoons, and above all a revolutionary radio technique, are being used to tell Russia's story and to sway the people in the countries controlled by Germany. Like Britain, the Russians are playing to an unseen audience in their propaganda for the enemy. The radio, supplemented by leaflets and cartoons, is their chief weapon."

Our own government is learning to do this sort of thing too, but our patriotic and ideological appeals so far have fallen far short of the genius long shown in commercial advertising.

Remember To Have Battery Checked

BECAUSE an automobile battery is not in sight, and sometimes not conveniently accessible—and because the filling station attendant doesn't add "and battery" when he says "Shall I check your water and oil?"—it is the battery that is most likely to be neglected, and to require replacement sooner than would otherwise be necessary.

Recommendation of persons experienced in the use and upkeep of batteries is that for ordinary driving the battery should be checked every two weeks (preferably the first and the middle of each month—for convenience in remembering) and that on a long trip the check-up should be each week.

The idea that a couple of years, or a certain number of thousands of miles, is the "life expectancy" of a good battery is all wrong, according to one informant—with proper attention from the start, he says, the lifetime of a good battery can be greatly extended.

So why not form the habit of saying, every two weeks, when you get gas—"and you might also check the battery."

Keeping Tab On New Books

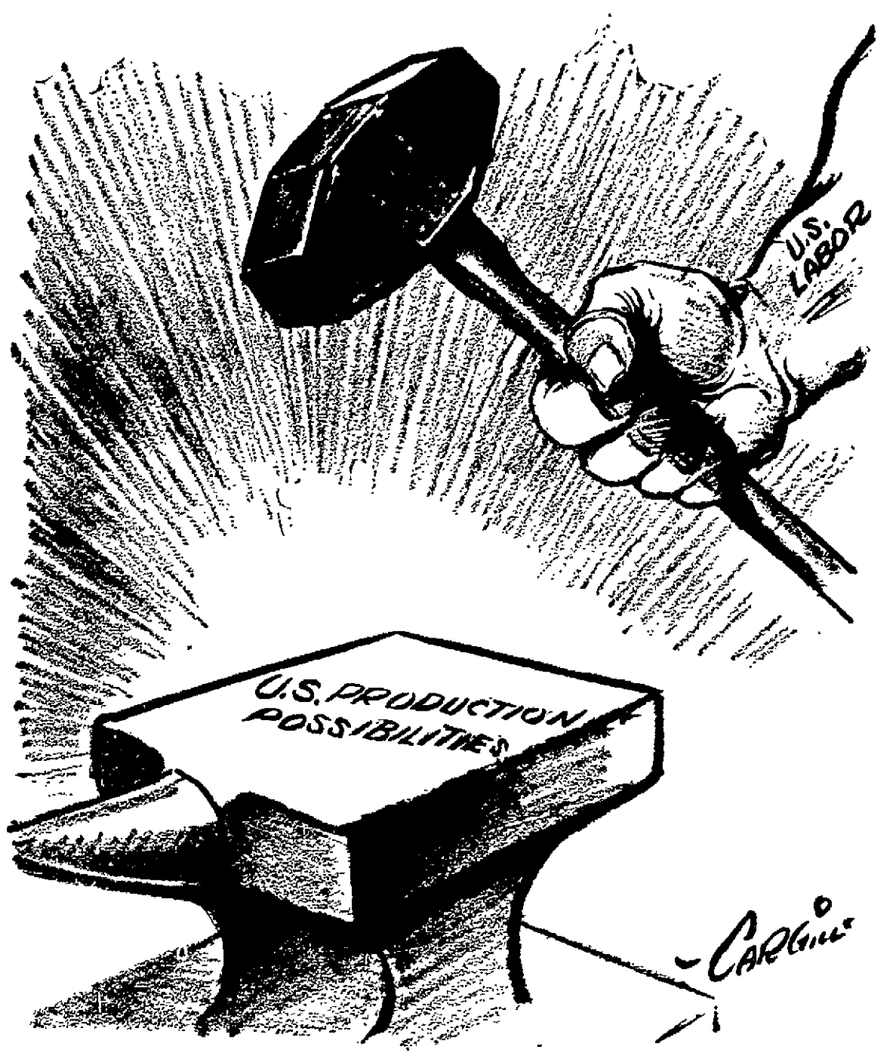
MANSFIELD'S public library, and local book stores, are fine places in which to browse around these days—when national and world affairs are moving at such a fast pace.

It is impossible, of course, to read all of the flood of new books coming off the presses—with many more promised for early fall—but there is at least an occasional one, such as "Berlin Diary," "You Can't Do Business With Hitler," "I Was a Nazi Flyer," and the like, which can scarcely be disregarded.

A good habit is to drop in at the library and book stores every once in awhile to keep informed on new books and make selections to your liking.

Some will recall that in "the good old days" no effort was made to dignify a booze joint by calling it a "parlor."

A POWERFUL WEAPON, IF RIGHTLY USED



White House Bottleneck Continues

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—Industry is still hoping for some move to end the White House bottleneck in national defense. So far there is a great deal of talk about it, but nothing fundamental is even promised

The trouble is that "Papa," as FDR likes to call himself in discussing any question involving final decisions, still has the last word. That means there can be no ACTION until FDR has passed on any particular problem. He has not really delegated authority. He merely has set up organization after organization which PROPOSES what shall be done. Generally a proposal, lying on the president's desk, is opposed by another proposal from another organization. And the president has to pass on the merits of both, sometimes three or four proposals, before a wheel can turn.

Most spectacular has been the rapidly-increasing overlapping, and friction, between the OPM, headed by William S. Knudsen, and OPACS, headed by Leon Henderson. Judge Samuel Roseman has been designated to arbitrate that dispute.

But the appointment of this referee shows the lack of power to act with which both OPM and OPACS have been entrusted.

THE contrast with the last war, when Bernard M. Baruch headed the War Industries Board and had almost czarlike powers, is distressing to those who want to see the "arsenal of democracy" function at top speed.

It is alleged that many mistakes were made in the last war. In fact it may be said many mistakes were made. But a careful survey of the post-war criticism by business men and army and navy officers in the service, shows that very few mistakes stemmed from this delegation of power to the War Industries Board.

Students of that period always have been aghast at the extent to which President Woodrow Wilson entrusted power to Newton D. Baker, his secretary of war. It was Secretary Baker who selected general John J. Pershing, despite the clamor for Major General Leonard Wood. This is true despite all the allegations that it was President Wilson's own feeling against General Wood which counted.

As a matter of fact, the decision not to send General Wood to France, after General Pershing had been selected as commander in chief, was made by General Pershing and not Secretary Baker. Secretary Baker also delegated authority. He went so far as to have General Pershing send his own choice, General Peyton C. March, back to Washington, to make sure that everything General Pershing wanted the war department to do was done. And there is no recollection that Secretary Baker ever overrode General March after that was done.

This is cited not because it is parallel in detail, but because it is the same sort of idea. The trouble now is that so little power is delegated. It is like the chief executive of a big business not permitting anything to be done, no matter how small, until he had approved it.

This has been characteristic of President Roosevelt since he entered the White House, and, curiously enough, it was believed to be characteristic of Woodrow Wilson. But when the big war effort came President Wilson delegated power right and left.

Even the mild Josephus Daniels far exceeded his constitutional powers in the months preceding our entry into the war, and this was due, old naval officers say, to the energy and push of none other than Daniels' assistant—Franklin D. Roosevelt!

Vaccinate Children as Safeguard.

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

SMALLPOX seems a remote and impersonal danger, but at any time it may become a real one. Eternal vigilance is the price of freedom against smallpox, and in any population where smallpox vaccination is allowed to lapse, there is constant danger of a recurrence of an epidemic.

Smallpox sleeps, but it does not die. Some place somewhere—indeed, in many places everywhere—there is somebody carrying around the virus of smallpox.

We had an example a few years ago of a traveling show which was nearly disorganized because a case of smallpox broke out in the midst of its unvaccinated membership, and rapidly spread all over.

You'll say that you have never seen a case of smallpox. Maybe you have, and maybe you haven't.

Not so very many years ago, an Indiana health officer noticed the following heading in the paper from a certain city in Indiana:

"The scourge of chicken pox which began early in the fall continues to increase in virulence. Many of the patients become completely covered with pustules and the head and neck are so swollen as to make the patient unrecognizable. There have been at least 300 cases; many of them resembling smallpox. Some of the patients are apt to go on until it becomes as bad as smallpox."

A photograph of one of these cases of "chicken-pox" was sent to the health officer at his request. No photograph could ever have illustrated a more beautiful full-blown case of smallpox.

During an epidemic in my own city about twenty years ago, of a most malignant form of smallpox, my office and the offices of my medical friends were crowded with people clamoring to be vaccinated. They had never been vaccinated before and had never seen the necessity of it until some real bad cases were just at their door.

Children are particularly susceptible to smallpox and should, of course, be vaccinated long before they go to school. Vaccination of children is not nearly as hard on them as the first vaccination of an adult. In fact, one American physician recommends smallpox vaccination on a child as soon as it is born; certainly at the age of six months or a year, the first smallpox vaccination should be done.

Smallpox immunity begins to run out about the fifth year, and re-vaccination at this time will usually result in a take, showing that the child is not immune to smallpox.

Of the students who matriculated at a certain college, approximately one-fourth had never been vaccinated against smallpox, and approximately two-thirds were in some degree susceptible. Only about 6% of the group had been vaccinated more than once previously. Compulsory vaccination obtains some places but voluntary submission as a result of a full knowledge of the situation is much the better course.

Timely Editorial

He Fell for Hitler.

The story is being printed of Fritz Thyssen, German industrial magnate, now in exile with the Nazis in possession of all of his property that they could lay hands upon. Thyssen backed and financed Adolf Hitler when he first made his bid for power in the Reich.

Thyssen, now disillusioned and a refugee, thought that National Socialism was the cure for Germany's ills. Of course, Hitler, the demagogue, declared in the streets that he would correct all of Germany's difficulties. Now Thyssen admits that he was swayed largely by Hitler's oratorical powers. "Oratorical" should be corrected to read "vocal."

Many of the political misfortunes of all nations are due to the fact that too many persons follow the fellow who talks the loudest and promises the most.—Toledo Blade.

Lewis Opposed Kearny Seizure Made Secret Effort to Block It

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—The big untold story of the government's seizure of the Federal Shipbuilding plant was John L. Lewis's undercover attempt to avert this action, vigorously demanded by the CIO Marine and Shipbuilding Workers.

In this stand the union was determinedly supported by OPM Associate Director Sidney Hillman, who charged the company with defying the Defense Mediation Board and insisted on the seizure to enforce the board's decision. Lewis did not show his hand directly in his secret operations, but worked through a close henchman, Allan Haywood, CIO organizational director.

Haywood entered the picture suddenly a week before the president returned from his conference with Churchill and while Hillman was quietly trying to get U. S. Steel, which owns Federal, to accept the Mediation Board's terms. U. S. Steel would not agree because of the "maintenance of union membership" provision, fearing that if this went into effect in its shipbuilding subsidiary, steel workers also would demand it.

In the midst of these behind-the-scenes maneuvers, Haywood got in touch with John Green, Scotch-born president of the MSW, and told him there was no chance of the membership maintenance provision's being accepted by the corporation. Green replied that it was the Mediation Board's award and that his union would not give it up.

Monday night, after Roosevelt returned and had conferred with Hillman, Secretary Knox and Mediation Board Chairman Will Davis, the latter showed Green a copy of a letter that, Davis said, Green would receive the next day from the president. In this copy, Roosevelt declared that the Federal dispute would have to be settled on the Mediation Board's terms.

Changed Letter.

TUESDAY morning, the president held another conference, with Knox, Myron Taylor, former head of U. S. Steel, and L. H. Korndorff, president of Federal. Several hours after this conference, Haywood again told Green that membership maintenance would not be accepted. Also that Green would get a letter from Roosevelt requesting Green to meet Korndorff in another effort to work our a peaceful solution.

All this was news to Green. He did not inquire, however, how Haywood happened to get this inside information of what had taken place at the White House conference.

Haywood volunteered to arrange the proposed conference with Korndorff and Green accepted. It lasted five hours, during which several substitute proposals were offered.

While this secret pow-wow was in progress a newsman, friendly with Lewis, was quietly tipped off about it, with the hint that a break in the long deadlock was in the making. The tip was correct, but the hint was not.

Green refused to agree to any substitute, in language or form. He insisted on the Mediation Board's award.

Informed of the Green-Korndorff failure, the president held another conference, attended by Knox, Hillman, Davis and Green, and expressed surprise at the outcome of the negotiation.

"Taylor told us," he said, "that John Lewis could arrange to settle this."

No one said anything and the president did not pursue the matter further.

Note: Taylor and Lewis have long been on cordial terms. It was under Taylor that U. S. Steel made labor history by signing a contract with the CIO steel workers.

Old Ailment.

A. J. T. TAYLOR, just back from a bomber flight to London, is telling his colleagues in the British Air Commission in Washington an amazing story of a wealthy London woman's reaction to bombing.

Her four-story house was bombed. The maid, in bed on the top floor, was dropped to the basement. The cook, in the basement, was injured, but not fatally. The mistress herself remained in bed uninjured, though two walls of her bedroom were destroyed.

Next day she drove to her country home, only to find that it too had been blasted to pieces while she was in town. A friend commiserated with her. But she wanted no pity.

"Sorry for me?" she said. "Stuff and nonsense! I have money left, and I'm lucky to be alive."

Then she went to the hospital to visit her maid, who moaned that she had suffered concussion, for her head felt queer.

"Stuff and nonsense!" again said the lady. "Your head was queer twelve years ago when I engaged you."

Note—Taylor, a Canadian, is the British equivalent of a dollar-a-year man. He works for a shilling a year, though in a long career as an engineer in England and Canada he has managed projects involving expenditures of over $100,000,000.

Merry-Go-Round.

WHEN Speaker Sam Rayburn departed for his beloved Texas ranch for a brief rest, he told Representative Cliff Woodrum, Va., "I'm heading for the end of a narrow road where there is no telephone." Which recalled to Capitol old-timers a remark once made by the late Senator Marcus Aurelious Smith, of Arizona, as he was leaving Washington during a sweltering heat wave: "I'm going to get me an overcoat and start north and I'm going to keep right on going even if I have to use it." . . . The "world-shaking" expose of the Nazi Propaganda Ministry that President Roosevelt is a Mason caused the Scottish Rite News Bulletin to point out that Frederick the Great, the idol of the Nazis, was a Freemason. Also six members of the U. S. Supreme Court and half the present members of Congress are Masons. . . . In order to provide greater employment for Negroes in defense industries, the National Negro Committee is campaigning for the construction of several hundred concrete cargo ships. . . . Heard in the Capitol: "One flight up and turn to the right for the Chamber of Horrors"—an irreverent reference to the Senate.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—The Marseillaise. No one ever plays it anymore. That doesn't make sense. Not for New York. Not for here, where music means so much financially and otherwise.

I listen to fifteen or twenty radio programs a day. I get around to perhaps a dozen restaurants and night clubs a week where insatiable crowds demand an ever increasing variety of music. I hear folk songs . . . I hear reborn World war ditties . . . I hear mountain music, and even hymns.

But I never hear the Marseillaise. I can't understand it. For here is spirit, and fire, in a city that dotes on spirit and fire. Here is a tune that is "catchy" in a town that eats, sleeps, and breathes "catchy" tunes.

TOMMY DORSEY has a great organization . . . He plays everything, from hillbilly tunes to jazzed classics . . . But, he doesn't play the Marseillaise. Sammy Kaye, Larry Clinton, Bennie Goodman, Eddy Duchin, Ben Bernie, Glenn Miller, Orrin Tucker, Kay Kyser, Artie Shaw—these boys live and die by music . . . Their arrangers can turn a goat-herder's grunt into rhythmic patterns that would charm your ears off . . . But I've never heard any of them, not one of them, touch the Marseillaise.

Why? Frankly, I don't know. I just can't understand why.

Several of us were talking about this the other night in a restaurant. The orchestra played Russian folk tunes. It played Londonderry aires. It played boogie-woogie, and it played "Arms for the Love of America."

But it didn't play the Marseillaise. I went over to the leader and requested the number. He was surprised. It just never had occurred to him to have an arrangement made. He couldn't play it. This was surprising, for, as you already know, the Marseillaise is one of the dramatic songs of all time. The experiences of its composer reads like a chapter out of Alexander Dumas.

THE composer's name was Rouget de Lisle, a captain of Engineers in the French army. . . . He was quartered in Strassburg, and the mayor of that town went to de Lisle and asked him to write a patriotic song for the soldiers of Luckner's army.

De Lisle said he would try, and that night he went to his lodgings in the Maison Bockel and began to play his violin . . . As he fiddled around the strains just seemed to come to him . . . He composed it then and there, and next morning he delivered to the mayor of Strassburg the song that shortly was to inspire the whole world.

You know what happened to de Lisle after that. The French revolution broke out . . . The song was caught up as the very cry for freedom that Frenchmen had been looking for . . . Curiously enough, de Lisle himself was imprisoned . . . He almost lost his head . . . But finally, after Robespierre's fall, he was released.

De Lisle's mother, however, was an ardent royalist . . . As Sigmund Spaeth records in his book "Stories Behind the World's Great Music," she turned to her son and said: "What do people mean by associating our name with the revolutionary hymn which those brigands sing?"

All this was 149 years ago . . . Broadway, with its mania for music, plays 149 songs a minute. It plays anything, and everything, and no questions asked.

Everything, that is, but the Marseillaise. I wonder why?

Words of Wisdom.

All, with on consent, praise new-born gauds, though they are made and molded of things past. —Shakespeare.

One-Minute Test Answers.

1. Yes, in fog, mist or falling snow steamers must sound blasts of four to six seconds duration at intervals not to exceed two minutes when at sea; on inland waters the fog horn must sound once a minute.
2. Yes.
3. Descending planes always have the right of way.

A Farmer's Diary

Ripened on the Vine

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

I KNOW a farmer south of here who has a large and thrifty cantaloupe patch. He told me last spring when I met him in the village to come to see him when the melons were ripe.

A few days ago I drove by. The farmer had gone to town on an errand, but his wife was selling melons on the lawn. All summer grass had grown thick on the little drive that led to the patch, but I noticed a well beaten path from the very kitchen door.

"They're fine melons," I said. "Is business good?"

"Why yes," she said. "We've done better this year than any year we've lived here. John and I never tried selling our own things before, but 'taint half bad. We had a little field of sweet corn coming on, tomatoes, peaches and apples. Potatoes, too, and eggs. It brings in ready cash, but I'm out here so much that my house looks like nobody lived in it. John says the work'll still be waiting when I get through, and I'd better keep the stand going. One thing, my friends visit me here under the trees, and don't get into the house," she added.

I wondered if I might go into the melon patch alone.

"Why sure," she said. "Anybody who has raised melons of his own will understand how to treat the ones belonging to his neighbors. See if you can find yourself the best one in the patch."

I thought she was more than fair. I left the stand and walked along the path to the patch. Twenty rows, ten feet apart, stretched to the border of the woods. The vines were green and thrifty. Only in a place or two did I see evidence of blight.

There in the sun, luscious melons lay, soft gold and green beneath the roughened netting of the exterior and loosening from the stems. All around me I scented the fragrant growing sweets. I took one in my hand and its stem came off. It was a delicate golden brown and the fragrance was tantalizing.

With my pocket knife, I sliced into its distended sides and ate the ten divisions nature had provided, one by one, while juice dripped like red wine and the dewy portions between the orderly rows of seeds delighted my eye with their frost-like daintiness. I know of no other fruit that seems to hold so well the flavor of distilled sunlight.

College Bound Lassies Ready To Embark

Girls Are Enthusiastically Preparing to Leave for New School Routine.

By RUTH TITSCHINGER

HUNDREDS of young women have been busy these last few days in preparation for a most important phase of their lives—the entrance into college. Anyway, you can bet many a Mansfield household is going to be plenty quiet when Mansfield's 200 or more college students leave home for the winter. If you could read mother or dad's mind as you closed your last bag you would probably find that, although they had said they would be "glad to get rid" of the youngsters for awhile, they still will be mighty lonesome.

There aren't many college students who don't realize their routine is going to be a lot different away at school. It's going to be "early to bed and early to rise" and the crisp fall evenings are going to be spent with a trig book in one hand and a pencil in the other. Night life with parties and dances are going to be "special" occasions during the next several months.

Some Mansfield families who are seeing their daughters off to their first year of college are: Mr. and Mrs. Carl Whitten, 153 Lind avenue, whose daughter, Margaret, will leave Sept. 23 for Ohio State university in Columbus. Margaret, who has always been interested in books will study to be a librarian. She will take a Liberal Arts course her first year. Jean Turner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Turner, 136 Rae avenue, is going to take a course in education at Parks college at Kansas City, Mo. Her parents are motoring her to Kansas City where she will begin her course Sept. 12.

Phyllis Koons, who has always been a whiz at languages, will major in French and Spanish when she gets to Otterbein college in Westerville, O., on Sept. 13. She is the daughter of Mr and Mrs. Ora Koons, 18 Bradford avenue Sarah Jane Diehl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Foster Diehl, 41 Douglas avenue, has already started her college career. She enrolled in the Office Training school in Columbus last June where she is taking a secretarial course.

Barbara Chatlain, all-round activities girl at Mansfield Senior high school this year, will follow the family tradition and go to Wittenberg college at Springfield, O. Her brother, Ed Chatlain, who has been a star athlete at the college for several years, graduated from there in June. Barbara will leave town in several weeks. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Chatlain, Olivesburg road. Kennagene Vermilya, daughter of Mrs. Fairy Vermilya, 197 Penn avenue, will leave Sept. 18 for Ohio Wesleyan college.

Thelma Vawter, a drama enthusiast, will major in public school music and dramatics at Rio Grande College at Rio Grande, O., according to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Vawter, Route 3, Mansfield. Thelma will leave town Sept. 7. Julia Fishback who was co-editor of the Mangan, (senior high school year book) this year, will attend Swarthmore college near Philadelphia, Pa She will take a general course but major in sociology. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Fishback, 371 North Townview circle, say she will leave Sept. 16.

Mildred Miller, daughter of Mr and Mrs. Nick Miller, 551 Marion avenue, will be enrolled at Ohio University at Athens, O., this winter. Mildred will take a Liberal Arts course. The Beer girls, Mary and Clara, who are cousins and nieces of Jesse Beer, former Senior High school principal, will also attend Ohio colleges. Mary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Beer, Park avenue east road, will attend Oberlin college at Oberlin, O., and will major in history. Clara Beer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Beer, Park avenue east road, will live in the alumni co-operative house when she starts her Home Economics course at Ohio State in Columbus Clara is planning to be a dietitian.

Betsy Cave, daughter of Mr and Mrs. Harry E. Cave, 42 Blymyer avenue, and Dorothy McFadden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs Wayne McFadden, 461 West Third street, are going to De Pauw university in Green Castle, Ind. They will leave the city Sept. 7. Both girls are enrolled in a Liberal Arts course Marilou Sowash, one of Mansfield high school's cheer leaders, will leave the middle of September for Wooster where she will attend Wooster college. Marilou, daughter of Mr. and Mrs Paul Sowash, 513 Heineman boulevard, will take a course in physical education.

Frances Smith, daughter of Dr. W. A Smith, Park avenue west and Mrs. Mary F. Smith, 71 Parkwood blvd, will go to Pennsylvania to attend Allegheny college at Meadville. Her course in liberal arts will begin Sept. 16. Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Epley, 621 Coleman road, are sending their daughter, Janice, who was active in music organizations at Senior High school, to Wittenberg college at Springfield, O. Janice, who will take Home Economics, will leave the city, Sept. 13.

AFTERNOON MEET.

Class Thirteen of the First Lutheran church will meet Tuesday at 2 p. m. at the parish house for its regular meeting.

Seven Meet to Say Farewells on Sunday

Friends since the beginning of their school days, seven young Mansfield women met Sunday afternoon at the home of Miss Jean Schill, 237 Helen avenue, to say their farewells before leaving for their respective schools of higher learning. Twelve years is a long time to stick together but this small group has met regularly in the past few years and before that time played dolls and rode bicycles together.

Frances Smith, Betsy Cave, Ruth Baer, Julia Fishback, Patty Bancroft, Dorothy McFadden and Jean Schill started into Western avenue school at the same time and this fall will separate for the first time to leave for different colleges. They were part of the original Girl Scout troop in Mansfield and all of the group have been active in many organizations at school.

Miss Schill entertained with an informal tea at which time much reminiscing was done and plans discussed for the coming year.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

I stepped to the bedroom door and summoned Mary, noting the while that my father was unstrapping the brief case he always carries himself, permitting no bellboy or other attendant to touch it.

When Mary came through the door the black notebook she had requested was in his hand, and he interrupted his directions to the bellboy about his other luggage, to give it to her.

"Is that what you wanted?" he asked, upping and sending away the attendant, even as he put the question. I recognized his mood. It was one of intense concentration—and impatience—and I devoutly hoped nothing would occur to annoy him.

"I am sure it is," Mary answered. "But I can tell in half a minute."

She took the small black-covered book in her hands, turned the pages, and a few seconds later looked up at my father brightly.

Mary Has Code Book.

"This is the one, beyond any doubt," she said.

"Then please go immediately to some room where you can be quiet," he directed, "and get to work upon that letter." Then he made a quick amendment.

"First, please let me see the letter," he said, turning to me. "You have it?"

I nodded, took Marion's letter to Ronald from its hiding place, and handed it to him. He read it carefully, and his face was stern and pitiful at the same time.

"Poor child!" he said. "She was forced to write this, of course. Let us hope that she had wit enough to circumvent her captors."

He handed the letter to Mary, who looked at me.

"Where would you like me to work?" she asked, and Philip Veritzen interpolated a quick suggestion.

"Why not the suite adjoining this?"—he gestured toward the masked door in my bedroom. "You will be alone there. I shall not come back there, and it ought to be admirably suited to your task."

"Thank you," Mary said, and turned toward the door, when her father-in-law stopped her with a grandiloquent wave of the hand.

"Mr. Spencer," he said pompously, "I think, before anything is done or planned, you should be informed of the terrible danger which your daughter has incurred —and luckily escaped — tonight."

"Please!" I said, throwing up my hand with a protesting gesture. But he paid no attention to my interruption, and when I saw a look of quick alarm flash into my father's eyes, and heard his voice issuing a quick staccato: "What! Tell me at once!" I knew there was no use trying to keep from his my part in the terrifying events of the evening.

"In the first place," Mr. Veritzen began, and I wondered if he were not taking a sardonic satisfaction in recounting my foolhardiness—for I knew my father would thus regard my conduct—"she never would have reached here tonight if her husband had not discovered the presence of a gangster on her train, and effectually gotten rid of him."

"Margaret!" My father's voice held nuances of both anger and terror, "Give me the full details of this at once."

I had been expecting the demand, therefore I had time for a small, malicious satisfaction of my own in Philip Veritzen's disappointment. But I knew that my father would be content with no abridged edition of what had happened, so I looked steadily at him and spoke slowly.

"Dick told you all about Carolyn's activities, didn't he?" I asked.

"Yes, including her telephone conversations with the gangster whom you encountered on the way home with her. Was he the man who boarded your train?"

"Yes, he was," I answered, and forthwith gave my father a "play by play" account of my encounter with the gangster, and Dicky's man-handling of him. When I had finished, my father's verdict was quick.

"Good work on Richard's part, and very poor judgment displayed by you, my darling daughter. Now, Mr. Veritzen, what is the 'second place' to which you have referred?"

Fremont Wins Title as Braves Split With Mud Hens

Sport Podge by REX HESS

And a happy first day of September to you all.

I am not the one to let a holiday pass without extending holiday greetings to one and all, even though I have yet to see a greeting card which says "Happy Labor Day," or even "Happy Fourth of July."

A stickler for the amenities always, I wouldn't pass up this cheery Labor day greeting even though the greeting card companies haven't caught the spirit of this holiday yet.

* * *

Just to make your holiday a bit happier, I can pass along to you today the information that President Joe Donnelly of the Ohio State league yesterday ruled out the second game of that misplayed doubleheader with Findlay the other night, which Mansfield lost, and all records compiled in that tilt are tossed out the window.

* * *

Oh, happy thought, before the frost,
It didn't count, that game we lost.

Donnelly gave out a few more bits of information, that Mansfield got $1,500 from Cleveland for the four Braves ticketed for Flint next year, Bill Salem, Jim Coleman, Eddie Mutryn and Tim Mangan; that at least five big league clubs, and possibly seven, are interested in complete backing of Ohio State league teams next season; and that he has a chance to put two more teams in the league.

One of the new spots is Galion, and here Donnelly stops short, fearing that while Galion will be a hot spot for a year or two, it may die down then and leave the league not much better off.

This is a bread and butter, league, Joe, a hand to mouth outfit as you've undoubtedly learned this summer.

So if Galion can add a little cake tomorrow and the next day to the bread and butter we've got today, why worry about the day after tomorrow?

Let 'em in Joe. We can use a hot spot in this league next season. If it cools off later, we can worry about that—later.

And now the weather should be cooling off, and we can start worrying about football right now.

Trot out to the high school athletic field this morning about 10 o'clock and you'll see the Mansfield Tygers going through their first official drill of the season.

Working on Labor day? Why, sure. These kids have to work so that some day, or night, they can play.

Ontario Beats Liberty Parks

Chalking up five runs in the third inning, Ontario coasted to an 8 to 5 victory over Liberty Park at the park yesterday as Dawson set the Mansfielders down with only three hits.

Ken Lockhart and H. Hammon led Ontario's nine-hit attack with two blows each, one of Lockhart's being for the circuit.

* * *

LeMunyon connected for two of Liberty's three hits, a home run and a triple.

Ethiopian Clowns to Play Here

Famous Colored Team To Meet Toledo Champions.

THE Krantz Old Dutch baseball team of Toledo, champions of the Maumee River City Federation, has been secured as opponents for the world famous Ethiopian Clowns of Miami, Fla., at the Fairground Park here, Friday night at 8:30.

Krantz Old Dutch nine, who have only lost two games all season, are on the way to the National Baseball tournament in Youngstown, which opens Saturday. When offered a chance to meet the Clowns here they jumped at it.

Among the stars who will appear here with the Krantz Old Dutch are three former Ohio State league stars. Walt Millser, former Mansfield catcher, will do the Krantz receiving, while Frank Katafias, former Lima Panda, first sacker, and "Peanuts" Amborski, Lima Panda pitcher, will also see action.

Dick Strugarek, Dayton U. star, who is rumored to have signed a Cleveland Indian contract, Al Mocek, ex-Piedmont leaguer, Walt Simunski, also of the Piedmont league, and George Wendt of the Michigan State league, are other Krantz players with pro experience.

The Clowns' reputation and record proves they have not only a great ball club, but also a spectacular, colorful nine as well. Yet those million fans who braved all kinds of weather to watch these famed comedians play were there mainly to see their spectacular show.

Ohio is a hotbed of enthusiasm where the Clowns are concerned. A total of 12,000 wild-eyed fans saw them in Crosley Field, Cincinnati, last Sunday, while more than 2,800 attended their game with the Wakeman, O., Red Caps, rank amateur team, last week.

Crowds like that don't just happen. An attraction has to have something. These comedians, headed by the one and only Peanut Nyasses have what it takes. The show they put on compares favorably with anything Ringling Brothers and other great circuses have to offer.

The fun starts at 8 o'clock, just one-half hour before game time. Peanut Nyasses, the funniest of the funny men, opens proceedings with his justly famous "Shipwreck Walk" which is something new and original. Then comes "Golf Match," "Pool Exhibition," Pepper Ball and Double Lightning Infield, a stunt in which the Clowns stage infield practice with two men hitting and two balls continuously in motion.

The seventh inning stretch is reallya knockout. The fun opens with "Shadowball," the Clowns' conception of how baseball would look if played without a ball.

The fun part of the program concludes with a fishing act in which Mofike, the No. 2 comedian, rows to the pitcher's mound and proceeds to cast for fish. It's a laugh from start to finish.

Cyclists Plan Races Sunday

Entries Arriving For Event At Fairground.

Motorcycle races sponsored by the Mansfield Motorcycle club and sanctioned by the American Motorcycle association, will be held at the Fairground Sunday, with Jim Davis, an old-time racer, acting as referee.

Nine races are booked for the afternoon, and they are expected to be packed with the usual thrills and spills of motorcycle speed events. The card totals 48 miles of racing.

Entries are coming in from all parts of this section of the country. Among early entries are Johnny Riley of Zanesville; Win "Speed" Smukens of Detroit; Wesley Dye of Lansing, Mich., and Frank Schwarze of Adrian, Mich., who won the Michigan state championship last year.

Woody Kimes of Mansfield also will be in the race to draw the cheers of the home fans.

A $400 prize list has been set up for the event. The Mansfield club has announced it will put about 1,500 gallons of oil on the track to put it in shape.

ROARING GRAND OPENS AT INDIANAPOLIS

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. —(AP)— Eight crack three-year-old trotters went to the post today in the $6,500 Horseman Futurity, feature of the opening program in a five-day Grand Circuit meeting at the Indiana state fair.

The event brought together again the year's arch-rivals of this class —Hambletonian stake winner Bill Gallon and His Excellency. Bill Gallon beat His Excellency in two of three heats of the Hambletonian but the Carolina colt got his revenge with victories in all three heats of the Governor's stake at Syracuse, N. Y., last week.

SHOWBOAT THOMAS

This fancy first sacker will be seen in action at the Fairground Friday night when the famous Ethiopian Clowns of Miami, Fla., meet the Toledo Champion Krantz Old Dutch team. Yes, the Showboat is one of the Clowns.

Trailing 1 to 3 going into the fifth, the Providents scored 12 of their 13 runs in the last three frames, the loudest blast in the attack being Jean Herrick's circuit blow. She also got a two-bagger, as did Sturgeon and Whitman.

Cleveland Makes Bid For Third

Can Pass White Sox By Winning Twin Bill.

CLEVELAND —(AP)— Chicago's White Sox stepped into a doubleheader with the Indians today with third place at stake.

Jim Bagby and Al Milnar for Cleveland and Lefty Lee and Johnny Rigney for the White Sox were the pitching choices.

Cleveland took the final game of its series with the Tigers yesterday, 7 to 4, after dropping the front end of the double bill, 7-5.

By this route the Indians managed to stay close to third place as Boston passed the White Sox into second. The tribe went into today's fray only one game behind Chicago and 1½ behind Boston.

Detroit hammered Bob Feller off the mound in the first game, making him give up 13 hits in eight innings, and then scored twice off Clint Brown in the ninth for the winning margin.

Schoolboy Rowe probably would have received credit for the win, but his head got in the way of Catcher Billy Sullivan's warm-up throw to second base midway of the eighth inning, and shortly thereafter he and his headache retired. Johnny Gorsica then left the Indians have two runs which tied the score, and Dizzy Trout became the winning pitcher after he had started the ninth with a triple.

The Indians' victory in the nightcap gave Chubby Dean his first win with Cleveland, but he had some relief help from young Steve Gromek. Tommy Bridges, Les Mueller and Bud Thomas were unable to hold Cleveland, Bridges being the loser.

The second game was featured by homers from the bats of Rudy York and Frank Higgins, the former reaching the top tier of the stadium's left field. The two games produced eight triples.

This is fair warning to the Cardinals and Dodgers, who are all tangled up in their National league pennant scrap like a couple of adagio dancers, that the New York Yankees are about to clinch the American league flag for what may be an all-time record for speed in hitting the jackpot.

While the galloping guys from St. Louis lead the bums from Brooklyn by the slim margin of two (count 'em) percentage points, all the Yanks need is the right combination of wins for themselves and losses for their last surviving rivals in the next 48 hours to put the finishing touches on their return to the driver's seat.

This new edition of murderer's row, 19½ games out in front after a 5-2 Sunday swatting, dished out to Washington, could be sure of no worse than a tie for the title after today's holiday tussling.

All they have to do is win both ends of a doubleheader from the Athletics, while the Boston Red Sox drop a pair and the Chicago White Sox wallop the Indians twice.

Then, come Tuesday and the show could be over, with Joe DiMaggio and his gang locking up their fifth championship in the last six years. And what's more of a miracle, none of the great clubs of the past ever rang the bell so early as Sept. 1 or 2. Even when the season started a week earlier than the usual April 19 or 20 opening day now in fashion, it took great outfits like the 1936 Yanks and the 1929 Athletics until Sept. 9 and Sept. 14, respectively, to cash in.

The Reds are 10½ games behind with as much chance to catch up as Ernie Lombardi has of stealing a base, which is practically impossible. Yesterday, they gave up five runs with loose fielding.

Meantime, the Dodgers broke hundreds of Brooklyn hearts by blowing an early four-run lead to the Giants. But Dolph Camilli clouted a three-run homer in the seventh to enable the Daffiness Boys to come from behind, and they coasted in from there.

A saliva test for the Browns ought to be suggested to Judge Landis today. Yesterday they just stood in there and slugged the White Sox twice—12-8 on 15 hits and 5-4 with a three-run rally in the ninth. This gave them four straight over the Sox, dropped Chicago into third place and boosted the Brownies themselves to sixth.

Boston's Red Sox took over second place by splitting with the Athletics, Ted Williams' 31st homer was good for three runs to take the opener 5-3, while Phil Marchildon tossed a three-hitter to win the seven-inning nightcap for the A's 3-1. He got Williams simply by walking him three times.

Max Butcher gave up 11 hits but he spread them around effectively to pitch the Pirates to a 4-3 win over the Cubs. The Boston Braves and the Phillies broke even in a double bill. Jim Robin's six-hit elbowing gave the Braves the opener, 8-3, while the Phils won the slugging afterpiece, 8-5.

Takes Loop Home Run Lead

EDDIE MUTRYN

Eddie Mutryn, slugging outfield-catcher of the Mansfield Braves, yesterday clouted two home runs in the second game of the doubleheader with Tiffin at the Fairground, boosting his season's total to 22, and passing the erstwhile league leader, Johnny Cindric of Lima, who is out of action with an injured ankle, and who finished up with 21.

NEW YORK — (The Special News Service) — Now we know why it's called Labor day. Every mail for the last couple of weeks has been full of announcements that football teams are starting practice today. . . . Heavest firing is in the south where our agents report Duke, Clemson and North Carolina, as usual, will be fighting for the top in the Southern conference, and Alabama, Tennessee (even without Major Bob Neyland) Georgia, Tulane and Ole Miss in the Southeastern.

When Paul Runyan and Sam Snead take on Byron Nelson and Ben Hogan in a U.S.O. benefit match at White Plains today, the oddity isn't that they're playing for $1,000, winner-take-all, or that the purse won't come out of the gate receipts, but that the score will carry over from the morning four-ball round into the afternoon session, when they'll play Scotch foursomes. . . . Eddie Mutryn Takes Home Run Leadership

Mansfield Winds Up Season at Tiffin in Single Game Tonight

MANSFIELD BRAVES won one championship yesterday and lost another as they split even with the Tiffin Mud Hens in a double bill at the Fairground before over 500 fans, dropping the first game 3 to 6, and copping the second 10-2.

The championship they won was an individual one, Eddie Mutryn running his season's home run total to 22 to pass Lima's injured Johnny Cindric, who bowed out of action with 21.

But the championship they lost was the important one of the moment, the Ohio State league second-half title.

They were still in the running after losing that first game yesterday, as the Fremont Green Sox also dropped the opener of a twin bill at Fostoria 6 to 7, leaving the Braves one and a half games behind with each club having two games left on the schedule.

Mansfield had to win its next two games and Fremont had to lose two before the league's second-half bunting could come to Mansfield.

The Braves did their part with a rousing home run barrage at the expense of make-shift southpaw hurlers Chuck Gerlach and Manager Harry Taylor, including two circuit blows by Eddie Mutryn, and one each by Freddy Wolpert and Bill Reinka.

But Fremont also snapped out of its losing ways, beating Fostoria 4 to 2 in the nightcap and winning the second-half and season championship. All of Fremont's runs were scored in the first three innings off Shisila, and Lefty Cisgen guarded the lead for the next four frames.

The death of Dick Morse's mother in Toledo Saturday night forced the Braves to use a patched-up lineup for the doubleheader yesterday, Tim Mangan going to third, Eddie Mutryn behind the plate, and Manager Clowson to right field for the first game. In the second game, with left handers hurling for Tiffin, Freddy Wolpert replaced Clowson.

Morse arrived home two hours before his mother died, and sent word he'd be unable to finish the season with the Braves, while wishing them luck in the championship drive.

Little Kenny King started the Mud Hens off in the first game with a first inning home run over the left field fence, but the Braves tied it up in their half of the first when Bob Ankrum doubled, went to third on a passed ball, and tallied on Tim Mangan's single.

Tiffin got two runs in the second. Dragovich doubled, Boone sacrificed and Weigle singled. Weigle stole second and came home when Mutryn threw the ball into centerfield.

Back came the Braves tying up the score again in the third on a single by Mangan, a double by Harry Siegbert, and an error by King.

But Don Bayliss closed the gate for the Braves for the rest of the game, and Tiffin pecked away at Bob Kuzava's offerings for two runs in the fifth and another in the seventh.

After Chuck Gerlach pasted a home run over the right field wall in the second game, Jim Coleman kept the Hens in check the rest of the way, an error in the seventh letting in the second Tiffin run.

Meanwhile the Braves racked up four runs in the third inning to win the game. Bill Reinka led off with a home run over the right field fence, and Jim Coleman and Bob Ankrum followed up with three-baggers. Ankrum scored on TeStruth's fly to left, and then Mutryn lofted a home run over the left field fence.

Wolpert's homer over the left field corner added a run in the fourth, and in the sixth the Braves chalked up five more runs. Wolpert, leading off, strolled, and Reinka and Coleman singled.

Taylor replaced Dragovich at this point, and Ankrum greeted him with a single and was out trying for second. TeStruth doubled, and Mutryn hit his second homer, a line drive over the left field fence.

The Braves wind up their season with a single game at Tiffin tonight at 8 o'clock.

GET MORE ICE—WE'VE GOT TO SOAK THE FROZEN PARTS IN ICE WATER. I TELL YOU THAT'S THE ONLY WAY WE CAN SAVE HIM
BUT, CHARLEY, WHO IS HE AND WHY DID YOU BRING HIM HERE?
I TELL YOU HE'S A BIG SHOT GANGSTER! AND I'M GOING TO MAKE HIM PAY ME BIG DOUGH FOR SAVING HIS LIFE.
I FOUND HIM IN THE LOCKER STORAGE PLANT-HALF FROZEN. INSTEAD OF CALLING THE COPS, I BROUGHT HIM HERE.

LISTEN, IF I CAN SAVE HIS LIFE IT OUGHT TO BE WORTH AT LEAST TEN GRAND. IT WOULD TAKE THREE YEARS OF DRIVING A TRUCK TO MAKE THAT MUCH.

Chapter XIX

Later in the day Curt was compelled to leave the hospital to keep some business appointments. Hill too had disappeared, and only Gay remained to keep her weary vigil in the reception room. Curt had urged to go home at least for a bath and a change of clothes, but she had refused saying she would wait until night.

After Hill had been gone for several hours, Gay began to worry about him. He had seemed so upset when he left. It was late in the afternoon when he returned.

Gay was startled when she saw his face. He looked as though he had gone through months of illness.

"I've been walking," Hill sat down abruptly. "And thinking. Trying to decide what to do."

"Trying—to decide what to do?" Gay asked. "About what, Hill?"

"About that promise you want me to make."

Gay's hands clinched in her lap. "You mean—about your staying away from April?"

"Yes," Hill's eyes hardened. "And I've made up my mind. I've fought it all out."

"What have you decided? You've decided I'm right, haven't you?"

Hill ran his hand through his tousled hair. Even his clothes were disheveled.

"No, I haven't," he said truculently. "I think you're wrong. Why should I stay away from my own wife?"

"You're divorced," Gay reminded him. "She is no longer your wife."

"That piece of paper!" Hill snapped his fingers. "Do you think a divorce decree can change the bond that exists between a man and woman who have loved each other as much as April and I have? The father and mother of a child?"

That didn't sound like the old Hill who had taken life so lightly. It sounded melodramatic coming from him. But seeing the look on his face Gay had no inclination to smile at his old fashioned philosophy. Sensing the way Gay felt Hill smiled crookedly:

"Oh, I know what you're thinking. I sound as though I'd just come home from a revival meeting after getting religion. But that's the way I've always felt about divorce. I've never believed in it where there were children. A man and a woman and a child are a family unit. No judge can change that. Not with a piece of paper with his name signed to it."

Gay eyed him thoughtfully. "Perhaps you're right. But legally, you're not married to April any more. You are going to marry Drusilla Bayne, and April is engaged to marry Curt."

"That doesn't change my obligation right now," Hill got up to pace the floor. "Until she is married to someone else, I've the right to take care of her."

Gay leaned forward in her chair to search his face: "What do you mean the right to take care of her?"

"Just that!" Hill stopped his pacing and looked down at Gay defiantly. "April needs someone to take care of her. There is no one in the world who has a better right to that job than me. I'm taking over."

"I don't understand —" Gay faltered. "You're not going to interfere with what is being done now, Hill. You can't!"

"Oh, can't I?" Hill exploded. "Well you can tell De Witt to get the hell out and stop playing Santa Claus. Throwing his money around and showing off, bringing specialists from Boston."

Gay stood up, her knees trembling: "Hill," she turned whiter, "how can you talk that way? Curt De Witt has been the best friend April has had in all her life! Why I don't know how she would have gotten through these last few months without his companionship. He loves her. He wants to take care of her."

Hill's eyes blazed: "I love her! I want to take care of her! And I'd like to see you or De Witt or anybody else stop me."

Gay threw up her hands. "This is a fine time to come to your senses," she smiled ironically, "in a hospital. Coming around here and announcing a sudden decision to take over a job you should have taken over six years ago."

Hill snapped. "That's neither here nor there! Don't rub it in."

Gay hoped she could reason with Hill. She said soothingly:

"Sit down and let's talk this thing out. Come on, Hill. Like a couple of grown ups. Let's not bark at each other."

He sat down, squaring his chin for battle. Gay said practically: "If you're taking over as you say what do you plan to use for money? April hasn't any. She has put every nickel she earned from radio back into the music school."

Hill raised up in his chair angrily. "I suppose you think I can't earn money."

"It's been a long time since you have," Gay reminded him. "You certainly can't take care of these bills if you spend your days on a golf course."

"I can turn pro, can't I?" Hill reminded her. "I can coach golf can't I? Why can't I take over an estate on Long Island and turn it into a golf club and use my name to make money?"

"How long do you thing all that will take?" Gay said patiently. "Meanwhile what's to be done about money to take care of April?"

Hill leaned forward. "Well, for your information, before I came up here just now I deposited fifteen thousand dollars with the superintendent of the hospital, and told him I would be responsible for my wife's bills."

"Fifteen thousand dollars!" Gay gasped. "Where did you get fifteen thousand dollars? You—didn't, you wouldn't borrow it from Dru?"

Hill winced: "Lord, you must think I'm a heel! Of course I didn't borrow it from Dru. A New York lawyer has been trying to buy the family home outside of Roanoke for two years and I wouldn't sell it. I went to see him today and told him he could have it. Cash on the line for fifteen thousand. If he took it today. He wrote out a check, and I brought it to Doctor Malcolm. That ought to take care of De Witt's crew of white haired boys from Boston, at least."

"You've sold Hillcrest?" Gay said with disbelief. "Oh, Hill!"

She knew how much Hill loved the old home in Virginia. How steadfastly he had refused to let it go out of the family, no matter how badly he needed money.

"I've sold Hillcrest," Hill snapped. "Now I guess you know I mean business. But you must promise me one thing."

"What is that?" Gay asked, dazed with the sudden turn of event.

"That if April gets well you'll never let her know I've done this. Swear it on your word of honor."

"But why? Why don't you want her to know."

"I'm not doing this to show off," Hill said gravely. "I'm doing it because I owe it to my wife. I've treated her rotten, and I'd like to make up a little of it—if I can."

"Oh," Gay choked. "I wish April could know, Hill. It would make her so happy."

"It's a little late for me to turn noble," Hill snorted. "When my wife may be dying. If you despise me, you can't imagine how much more I despise myself. I'd like to ease my own conscience a little. That's about all the good all this will do now, I guess."

"Oh—Hill," Gay reached out her hands in a gesture of pity. "I don't hate you! You mustn't despise yourself!"

"If April dies," Hill got up and walked to the window. "I'll always blame myself. I'll never get over it. Never!"

"What have you had to do with April's accident?" Gay said. "That's nonsense."

"She was going to work to support my son when it happened, wasn't she?" Hill said miserably. "Driving through the snow and ice to make a broadcast. If this hadn't all happened she would have been at home where she belonged on a stormy winter night."

"Don't dramatize things so!" Gay said sensibly. "That won't help matters any. It's fate. I suppose. Look at it that way."

Hill left the window and sat down again, facing Gay.

"You'll tell De Witt," he said, defiance creeping into his voice again, "that I'm taking over. Serve notice on him that the Hillyers don't accept charity from strangers. That we'll pay our own doctor bills."

"I'll tell him," Gay nodded, feeling suddenly ill with dread of talking it over with Curt. "Mr. De Witt should be back any moment now."

Hill got up and took his hat from the table beside him.

"Then I'll leave for the time being, so the coast will be clear. I'd tell him myself, only I might lose my temper."

"You must stop feeling that way," Gay warned. "Or even if you are jealous of Curt you must hide it and be decent when you meet. Always bear in mind that he didn't have anything to do with the breaking up of your marriage. And remember too that you announced your engagement to Dru Bayne the night April came back from Reno."

Hill exploded: "I wouldn't have done it if I hadn't been at La Guardia field and seen her coming out of the airliner with De Witt! I had to pay her back somehow for leaving me flat and riding away like a prima donna in his limosine with him. She high hatted me as though I were dirt under her feet."

"You were tight," Gay reminded him. "She just stood on her dignity and put you in your place."

"Oh, I know that," Hill shrugged. "But I saw red at the time. I went to Dru's apartment to a party and before I knew what had happened our engagement was announced. I was kidding, and she took me seriously."

"Really?" Gay's eyes flickered with amusement. "Well you certainly played a joke on yourself, didn't you?"

Hill realized suddenly he had revealed too much that he hadn't meant to reveal. He said abruptly:

"That remains to be seen. Well, I'm going to have some dinner and do a little more thinking. I've got to figure this thing all out. I'll be at my apartment if you need me. And remember, not one word to April—ever, about all this."

Gay nodded: "I promise."

When Hill had disappeared down the hall Gay herself got up to pace the floor. Never in her life had she ever dreaded any ordeal so much as telling Curt De Witt that she thought it advisable he withdraw to the sidelines and let Kent Hillyer assume the responsibility of taking care of April. But she knew it was useless to defy the new Hill.

Curt arrived a few minutes later. He said sinking into a chair wearily:

"Fortunately I met Hillyer in the elevator. They need him for another blood transfusion. April is sinking. Dr. Halling is afraid."

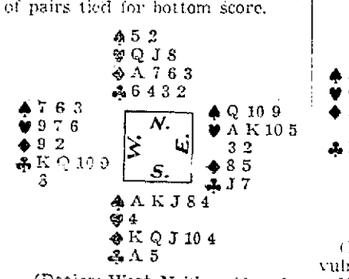
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

A TIME TO TAKE RISKS

A match-point duplicate player has one job that never confronts the rubber addict. The latter has nobody to beat but the players at his own table. The duplicate devotee tries to gain better scores on the hands than his rivals at other tables. Since he cannot tell exactly what they do on a particular deal, he must be skillful at estimating. Sometimes after the dummy goes down, he can reckon that a certain number of other pairs will reach a certain different contract, promising to produce a better score than his. In such a case, he is often justified in risking his own contract by a method of play which, if it works, will give him an extra trick and thereby lift him out of the group of pairs tied for bottom score.



(Dealer: West. Neither side vulnerable.)

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1 ♥	1 ♠
2 ♣	Pass	2 ♥	3 ♦
3 ♥	4 ♦	4 ♥	5 ♦

After West led the heart 9 and the dummy went down, a very expert South realized he had let himself and his partner be talked out of a slam which would be bid by a number of North-South pairs at other tables. He considered that he and his partner up to that time had quite a good score, with a real chance to win, but that they now were threatened with being beaten in case the diamond slam could be made, which would put the 5-Diamonds bidders, who barely made their contract, into a tie for bottom score.

If he could make an extra trick, however, it would lift his pair above the bottom group, placing it between those and the toppers. So he decided to try for 12 tricks. He put on the heart J from dummy, East winning with th. K and returning the clu' J. He won that with the A. It would be easy to ruff out the spades and so be sure of 5-Diamonds, giving up a club trick at the end. But, if the spade finesse would work, and the suit was divided evenly, which seemed likely, he could prevent a club loser.

He took two diamonds and the spade A, led the diamond J to the A and finessed the spade J. If this had lost, a club return would have set him. But it worked. The spade K and two other spades furnished three club discards from dummy, so the club 5 could be ruffed. Thus he made his extra trick and thereby ultimately won the event by one match point.

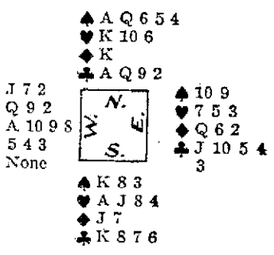
Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer: West. North - South vulnerable.)

How can West figure out the defense which will beat South's 6-Hearts on this deal, if South, during the bidding, had supported a club call by North?

HOROSCOPE

For Tuesday, Sept. 2.

This should be a day of magnificent opportunity for adventure, romance, substantiated rewards and recognition for past performances, as well as surprising openings for the launching of original, independent and creative expression in new projects and on a large scale. Public interest may be involved, with the hearty support of political, diplomatic, fraternal or other influential organizations. The combination, while having unforeseen denouements, will have a far-reaching effect on the future life and its fortunes.

Those whose birthday it is should be on the eve of a year of outstanding achievement, with advancement, adventure, romance, stabilized fortunes and position, all coming with surprise and breath-taking experiences. Old undertakings and performances may be in line for rich rewards and new projects of a high creative or inventive importance should also find substantial cooperation from high places, either political, diplomatic, fraternal or community. It is a propitious time for working toward the most ambitious of goals.

A child born on this day, although energetic and high tensioned, should have exceptional talent, deep intuitions and creative ability, as well as stable and steadfast character. It will enjoy a romantic, successful life, perhaps in public service.

What A Toy That Would Make!

Absorbed in the army and its equipment, these youngsters clamber over a 37-mm. anti-tank gun used in maneuvers during western Washington state war games. To the kids, the field piece probably represents a swell toy they could play with. Behind the gun are Privates Aldo Grotti and Cornelius Stamm.

Why Depend Upon a Chance Recommendation?

The recommendation of some well-meaning but misinformed person is too often the basis upon which a funeral director is selected.

The best guide is to know something about the funeral services that are available in this community. To that end we invite inquiry, and inspection of our Funeral Home as well as other facilities.

Those who have investigated find this funeral service unusually well equipped, and our prices no higher than they would pay elsewhere.
